Lt. Gen. Rex C. McMillian

COMMANDER, MARINE FORCES RESERVE

Hurricane Matthew struck Haiti on October 4, 2016. The storm destroyed valuable farm land and infrastructure. It took out roads, bridges and livelihoods. The first Category 4 storm to hit the island since 1964, it left thousands of Haitians homeless. They were in a state of shock and desperate for help.

That help came the next day with Task Force Matthew from Special Purpose MAGTF–Southern Command, already in the region. Reserve Marines comprised a majority of the task force and worked with the Navy, Army and Air Force to deliver supplies during the critical early phases of the disaster's relief operations. They also worked with the 24th MEU and the USS Iwo Jima when those elements arrived seven days later.

I am proud of the way our Marines performed. The relief efforts in Haiti were a prime example of how the Reserve Component supports the Total Force and how we work seamlessly with not only the Active Component, but with other branches of service and civilian agencies. But I want you to remember this: the people of Haiti, who received more than 478,000 pounds of supplies thanks to your efforts, did not see Reserve or active duty Marines. They saw Marines. When our nation calls on us to respond to global crises, it does not care whether we come from the Active Component, SMCR, AR or IRR. The nation just expects its Marines.

As Marines, we must remember that the successes of yesterday and today do not guarantee victory for tomorrow. I want you to be proud of your accomplishments and acknowledge your enormous contributions to the Marine Corps and to the national security of our country. You went hard in 2016. In 2017, I want you to go even harder.

In this year's message to the force, our Commandant listed six resolutions that all Marines must follow in 2017. One of those resolutions was to improve our readiness because we need Marines and equipment to fight right now. Our readiness begins with you. You must ask yourself: are you ready to deploy tonight? If not, what must you do to prepare? Your personal affairs must be in order. Have you finished your annual training classes online? Are you ready financially? Do you know your ECC? Is your passport current? When was your last dental exam? You must be able to answer all of these questions, and you must ensure your Marines can as well.

You are members of the most feared and respected military organization in the world. Marines are not just able to operate in chaotic environments rife with violence, disorder and extreme stress. We thrive in those environments. Our training, therefore, must continue to simulate those adverse conditions and reflect the challenges that we must face on the battlefield. While providing that realistic training will continue to be my top priority in 2017, I need you to understand that readiness is about so much more. We must continue to always train hard. We must ensure our personal affairs are in order. We must always hold each other accountable. It starts with you.

Semper Fidelis

Sgt. Maj. Patrick L. Kimble

SERGEANT MAJOR, MARINE FORCES RESERVE

On August 29, 2016, approximately 500 of you stood in formation at New York's Times Square. Within your ranks stood World War II veterans, first responders and new recruits. It was a reminder not only of the diversity and breadth of skills that we bring to the fight, but also that the title of Marine creates in us an unbreakable bond that we carry for life. Marines from 1st Battalion, 25th Marine Regiment further celebrated that bond when they met for a reunion for their 2006 deployment to Fallujah, Iraq. Our Marines reunited, some having not seen their brothers-in-arms since they wore the uniform 10 years earlier. Veterans Day saw a wreath-laying ceremony in Boston, Massachusetts, and a solemn memorial in Pasadena, California, in which our Marines honored the fallen and celebrated our heritage. Members of the communities where we serve came out in droves to celebrate the strong ties we have with them. They came out to thank us for our 100 years of selfless service and sacrifice to our nation.

Be proud of your history. Be proud of the Marine Corps Reserve's contributions to making us the most formidable foe in the world. Be proud of your own contributions. But do not let up. Now is the time to turn up the volume. Resolve to go even harder in 2017. Embrace the challenge of our newly-revamped physical fitness standards. I need you to not only PT harder, but smarter. Do not focus exclusively on physical fitness.

The Commandant has ordered us to upgrade our most important weapon: our minds. I need you to get just as serious about sharpening your minds as you are about sharpening your bodies. As Secretary of Defense and retired Marine General James Mattis said, "[t]he most important six inches on the battlefield is between your ears."

You must take ownership of your professional education. It is about much more than just checking the box and completing Corporal's Course. Just as it takes discipline, hard work and practice to get your 20-plus pullups or to set a new 3-mile record; it takes discipline, hard work and practice to become better thinkers. Just as you set physical fitness goals, I expect you to set mental fitness goals. Read at least five books from the Commandant's reading list. Read at least five more of your own choosing – it could be history, fiction or current events. Read what interests you. The best way to learn something is by experience. While I expect you to take advantage of the numerous opportunities for deployment to gain that experience, reading is another way of getting it. By reading, you learn through someone else's experience. You learn one way someone has solved a problem. You become better Marines.

This is not a part-time gig. You are professional warriors, and I expect you to act like it 24 hours a day and seven days a week. We must hold ourselves and our Marines accountable. I have zero tolerance for hazing, sexual assault, alcohol-related mishaps or any other failure of discipline. In 2017, I need you to drink less alcohol, use less tobacco, read more and train smarter. It is a privilege to serve in the most elite fighting force this world has ever known. Embrace it, honor it and through it all, don't forget to have fun.

★ Yellow Ribbon Program

If your tuition and costs exceed the amount you are receiving from the Post-9/11 GI Bill, you may qualify for the Yellow Ribbon Program.

Degree-granting institutions of higher learning participating in the Post-9/11 GI Bill Yellow Ribbon Program agree to make additional funds available for your education program without an additional charge to your GI Bill entitlement. These institutions voluntarily enter into a Yellow Ribbon Agreement with the Department of Veterans Affairs and choose the amount of tuition and fees that will be contributed. Veterans Affairs matches that amount and issues payments directly to the institution.

For more information on the yellow ribbon program visit www.benefits.va.gov/gibill/

YOUR CAREER

KNOW (AND UNDERSTAND) your options IN THE RESERVE

There is more to the Reserve Component than drilling once a month and annual training two weeks a year. There are a number of different ways to participate, such as serving part-time with an active duty unit through an IMA Detachment, volunteering for active duty operational support orders or a mobilization, or making a full-time career in the Reserve Component through the AR program.

SELECT MARINE CORPS RESERVE (SMCR)

The Select Marine Corps Reserve (SMCR) offers the most traditional form of Reserve duty. A typical unit in the SMCR has a designated drill weekend every month. On top of monthly drills, that unit also does its annual training, often in conjunction with an exercise. The exercises can range from large-scale exercises in which the Marines operate as part of a MAGTF, such as ITX or African Lion. They can also participate in annual training as part of smaller teams such as the Innovative Readiness Training programs or through civil affairs detachments.

SMCR Marines typically train as units, so it is a good way for Marines to experience camaraderie and unit cohesion without being on active duty. Training as units according to a relatively rigid schedule is a hallmark of service in the SMCR.

INDIVIDUAL MOBILIZATION AUGMENTEE PROGRAM (IMA)

Through the IMA program, reserve Marines fill particular needs of active duty units on a part-time basis through the IMA program. As an IMA Marine, you could fill a billet with Marine Forces Pacific, Marine Forces Europe or wherever there is a need. Marines serving in an IMA Det often have much more flexibility than their SMCR counterparts as when, where and how many drills they do depends on that Marine's schedule and the needs of the unit. IMA billets are typically for more experienced reserve Marines (E5 and above). These billets are good for Marines who need to have a more flexible drill schedule.

ACTIVE RESERVE (AR)

Marines in the AR program serve full-time. They receive all the same pay and benefits as active duty Marines. They also change duty stations, can serve as additional billets as recruiters or drill instructors and can qualify for active duty retirement benefits.

These Marines fall under the Reserve Component, however, and serve in billets on Inspector-Instructor staffs, Marine Forces Reserve headquarters or Manpower and Reserve Affairs.

INACTIVE READY RESERVE (IRR)

The IRR is a pool of Reserve Marines that have no participation obligations, but can be called to active duty in a time of crisis. Marines in the IRR report one day per year at a "Mega Muster" where they have opportunities to update their contact information, learn about benefits of continued service and the many opportunities for participation in the Reserve Component.

ACTIVE DUTY OPERATIONAL SUPPORT (ADOS)

There are always opportunities for Reserve Marines to serve temporary stints on active duty. These short-term orders, which are usually six months but can vary in length, are called active duty operational support (ADOS). Reserve Marines on ADOS can serve anywhere. Tasks run the gamut from administration to training to operations. These Marines provide critical support to units that are often overburdened, experiencing manpower shortfalls or have high operational tempos. For a list of ADOS opportunities, see:

EARNING POINTS what you need to know:

POINTS MEASURE YOUR PARTICIPATION IN THE RESERVE FORCE AND DETERMINE RETIREMENT BENEFITS. IN ORDER TO GET A SATISFACTORY YEAR, YOU MUST EARN 50 POINTS.

- You get 15 points just by keeping your MOL information updated. The rest is based on your participation.

• Drill: 1 Point per Drill Period (Each Drill weekend normally has 4 Drills, so this is good for 4 points on a normal Drill weekend).

• Funeral Honors: 1 Point for funeral honors (normally capped at 1 Point per day).

• Active Service: 1 Point for each day on Active Service (Annual Training, ADOS, Mobilization)

• PME: 1 Point for every three study hours of qualifying military correspondence courses.

Maximum Points

The maximum number of retirement points Marines can earn in any given year is 365 (366 in leap years). This corresponds to serving every day on active duty. You cannot "double dip" on Retirement Points and do correspondence courses or other service to earn more than 365 Points in a given year.

Career Credit Retirement Report (CRCR)

This is a snapshot of reserve participation, which Marines can access via Marine Online. Marines must always ensure the accuracy of their CRCR and are required to certify it once per year.
