

COMMUNICATOR

To remain ready to fight tonight, we have to continue meeting our Professional Military Education requirements. The education and training Marines receive at schools and during training courses, contributes to their overall development. PME equips Marines with vital tools to successfully carry out the duties of their next rank.

Without executing their corresponding PME, Marines cannot be promoted to the next rank, which ultimately hinders overall force readiness. Completing PME requirements not only benefits the institution, but also the individual Marine in their civilian and military career paths.

Professional development doesn't end there. Furthering your education beyond what the Marine Corps requires of you is always encouraged. Whether you are taking advantage of tuition assistance or reading a book from the Commandant's Reading List, expanding your education contributes to your development as a Marine. Semper Fidelis.
